Listening:

I have written about several CD players auditioned in my system, including some in the $3,000+ price range. None of these sounded consistently better than my older Sony, and some were not as good. Generally the sound of my best records was a little better than any of my CD collection- that is, until the Bryston BCD-1 arrived. Its reproduction of music through my system exceeds the performance of any other CD player I have ever heard.

For the first time, CDs sound as good or better than records of the same music. With a well-recorded CD the BCD-1 provides a three-dimensional soundstage as well as a correct and consistent CD playback.
